About Dominiek Colpaert

Dominiek Colpaert paints, creates graphic work, and builds installations. He houses all of this in his own small 'factory,' aptly named Topstudios (with a touch of irony). Dominiek poetically and playfully portrays the desire to transcend the mundane, depicting a surreal world where the ordinariness of things is magnified.

“NATURE, ARCHITECTURE, AND THE SUBURBAN DREAM

For many people, going on vacation means visiting a region that appeals to them. Often, we go on city trips to soak up the atmosphere of the city or head out into the vast wilderness to completely unwind. In the second space of the gallery, there are several works that can be interpreted as interesting holiday destinations. On the left side, we find three surrealist paintings by Dominiek Colpaert depicting a house, a television, and a television as a house. The artist uses pink and blue pastel shades to give the scenes a saccharine appearance. We seem to find ourselves in a perfectly organized American suburb where the sun always shines, the gardens are meticulously landscaped, and electronics play a prominent role in household life. However, Colpaert punctures the so-called "suburban dream" by shrinking the scale of the houses and placing them in a room or on a screen.”
